STRATEGIC PLAN MONTHLY UPDATE

1 Experience: We strive to ensure that individuals have exceptional interactions with the library and are connected with resources and services that increase their quality of life. We exceed expectations.

1.1: The library has comfortable, flexible spaces that encourage use and connection.

1.2: The library's collection is vibrant and convenient to access.

Staff is printing new larger font labels for the large print collection in-house. Reducing the amount we spend on custom label orders and increasing the visibility of the large print collection.

Staff began using new hub labels on discs that have the matching barcode printed right on them. This will help match items to their cases.

1.3: The library is committed to quality patron interactions.

Circulation has begun the process of applying to be a passport site.

Notary service has been soft launched. Circulation staff at Main can call Beth or Melissa if they are available when patrons ask at the desk. Staff are looking into creating a webform for advertising the service and to make appointments.

2 Engagement: We work continuously with the community to increase our reach and expand our impact. We are a valued community partner.

2.1: The community has high awareness of library services and programs.

2.2: The library interacts with its diverse community to discover and respond to current needs of all groups.

We continue to work on building Elementary school outreach. In May alone we had 45 school visits to promote summer reading. We reached 3,226 kids in grades K-6.

2.3: The library creates and deepens meaningful partnerships with local organizations and businesses.

The Program Committee evaluated policy 8 with an emphasis on identifying and rectifying barriers to program partnership with local businesses and organizations.

Executive Director Dilger met with outgoing and incoming District 15 superintendents. Communications Dept. reached out to services organizations within the community to inquire about membership and partnerships.

3 Endurance: We strive for sustainability in our practices, human and financial resources, and facilities. We are a resilient organization.

3.1: The library is a trusted steward of resources.

We have placed our first three homebound volunteers in PMD. They will be helping pull library materials from the shelves and make deliveries to/from patrons.

3.2: The library is a preferred employer that values staff development and retention.

We evaluated health insurance options, and in addition to our Blue Cross Blue Shield PPO and HMO plans, employees now have the option to select a high deductible HSA plan. The library will make a contribution for employees who select this HSA plan. We have also increased the amount the library will contribute towards single coverage for dental, vision, and life insurance.

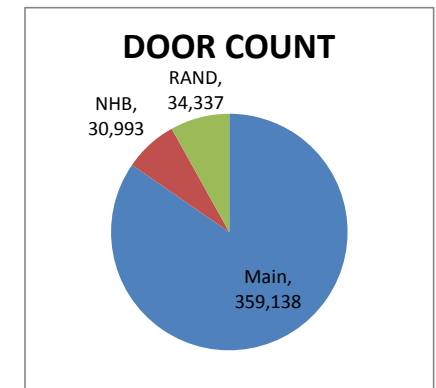

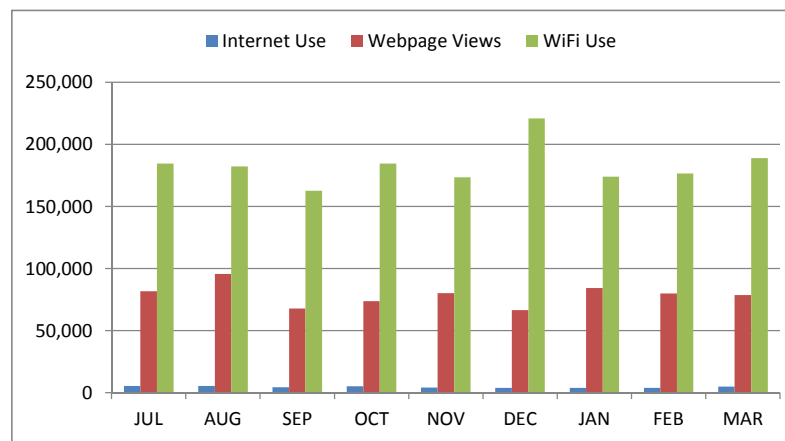

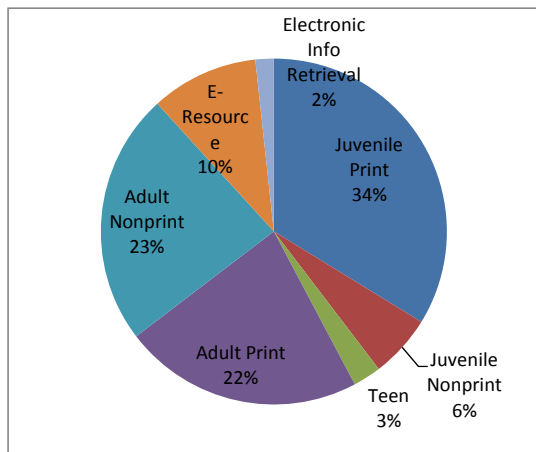

We held a Benefits Fair for all employees to meet representatives from our insurance brokers, IMRF, and ComPsych, our employee assistance program. All full time employees were also invited to attend a presentation by our brokers to hear more about the changes in the insurance plans.

3.3: The library's systems and facilities are resilient, modern, and efficient.

The heat exchanger project is complete. All tubes were replaced one week earlier than planned. Staff and patrons appreciated the ability to cool the building before the hot weather began. The new tubes should sustain the heat exchanger for another 20-30 years.

How Much For Full-Day K?

Board Remains Open To New School, Offerings For Kindergarten

By RICHARD MAYER
Associate Editor

Palatine Elementary School Dist. 15 board members Wednesday, May 8 directed Supt. Scott Thompson to move forward with a plan that would add a new school to the northeast part of Palatine, resulting in full-day kindergarten services throughout the district.

Thompson told the board that if the district were to create a school in vacant retail space at Park Place Shopping Center, it would cost the district, to start, approximately $17.85 million. However, additional costs would be likely and there are several funding options the district could choose from to offset those expenses.

The new 80,000 sq. ft. school, which could open as early as August 2021, would serve between 750-800 students in grades K-6. It would contain 30-32 classrooms and may serve as a community school, meaning other social services could be provided after school hours including a partnership with the Palatine Public Library District.

A two-acre play field would be constructed next to the school.

According to Thompson, 22 percent of the district's student population lives in that area where there is no school today.

The district is looking to take over the former Whole Foods and adjacent space up to the Goodwill store for the school. The former T.J. Maxx store would be demolished to create the playground.

The district would purchase the property for $4.1 million. Constructing the school is estimated at an additional $13.75 million bringing the total to $17.85 million. Thompson said the district would be required to install a storm shelter that could increase the overall cost.

For the time being, the district is looking at leasing the space from the construction company while work is being completed. Because of that, the district anticipates spending over $262,000 on real estate taxes. However, once the district takes ownership, it would be exempted from paying property taxes.

In Thompson's financial projections, he estimates the district would need to spend $2.1 million on furniture and equipment for the new school and $125,000 for playground amenities, totaling an additional $2.48 million in the first year and raising the total to around $20.34 million.

Thompson suggested board members approve life safety bonds for between $4.1-$5.1 million and sell a vacant 40-acre tract of land on Ela Road in Inverness that was meant for a school years ago, but never came to fruition. He believes the district could sell that land for $4 million.

If the district sold that land for the asking price and took out bonds, the district could reduce the initial cost for the new school by $8.1-$9.1 million, bringing the remaining balance down to between $11.2 and $12.2 million, which the district could use reserve funds to pay.

Financial projections show that if the district used reserves to pay the remaining balance to construct the school, by the 2021-22 school year the district would see its reserves drop from $59.6 million or 36.3% of total expenditures, to $46.3 million or 28.2% of total expenditures. The following year, reserves are estimated to total $49.7 million, or 29.9% of total expenditures.

Board policy is to keep around 30% of total expenditures on hand, while the state believes 25% is sufficient. Thompson pointed out estimated reserve balances would remain healthy even after using funds to pay for the new school.

Once the school is up and running, annual costs would be associated with its operation. According to Thompson, it would cost the district $1.27 million annually due to new personnel, utilities and supplies. That amount would increase every year based on salary increases for teachers at the school.

With the new school up and running, space would be freed up at other schools to accommodate full-day kindergarten throughout the district to a tune of $1.3 million annually, resulting in new annual costs of around $2.6 million.

With Palatine expected to retire several Tax Increment Financing (TIF) districts in the next 2-8 years, the district anticipates $4.23 million to be returned to Dist. 15 annually from the village by 2027-28, which can be used to pay for ongoing expenses to operate the new school and full-day kindergarten.

Based on annual costs to run the school and the district receiving new tax revenue in the coming years, the district anticipates the school and full-day kindergarten to run a deficit for the next several years, but eventually operate at a surplus within the next 10 years.

Thompson said the district is saving a lot of money by utilizing an existing building instead of constructing anew.

"This would get us full-day kindergarten, which is of high value and the school would be situated close to many of our kids," he said. "There is a lot reward and opportunities associated with some of the risk."

If the new school comes to fruition, the district would be able to offer full-day kindergarten for 1,100-1,200 students district-wide, according to Thompson.

Thompson said this would enhance the entire community while placing students closest to their home school while keeping busing costs down.

With the board giving Thompson direction to continue moving forward, at the next board meeting on June 12 Thompson plans to provide the board with a preliminary look at what new district boundaries would look like, if the new school was built in addition to a proposal to issue the life safety bonds.

- Journeys: The Road Home will hold its annual Superheroes 5K Run/Walk June 15 to benefit the homeless.

All year long, officials with Journeys: The Road Home in Palatine work to provide shelter and social services to suburban homeless and those at risk of becoming homeless.

But on June 15, they will play.

Participants of all ages are welcome in the annual Superheroes 5K Run/Walk. - Courtesy of Paige Jacob

For the 12th straight year, Journeys will host its Superhero 5K run and walk. The event is geared toward families and it returns to Palatine Towne Square where organizers hope for 400 participants, ideally dressed in superhero costumes.

The idea, they say, is that people who participate can be superheroes for the homeless who are struggling right in their own community.

Officials with Journeys say the race supports all the social services they provide for the homeless or those at risk of becoming homeless. They range from its food pantry, laundry availability and clothing closet, to emergency shelter and transitional housing for our clients.

"This is a race that continues to grow each year," says Paige Jacob, Journeys spokesperson. "Families love to come out in costumes and dressed as their favorite superheroes, while also being a superhero for the homeless."

The race appeals to a wide range of people in the community, from competitive and recreational runners, to those who enjoys walking. They also offer a 1-mile fun run for children immediately after the first wave goes off.

Serious runners appreciate that the Superhero Run is a certified and timed race, and is supported by the village of Palatine, the Palatine Police Department and the Palatine Park District.

"It is truly a community-supported event," says Beth Nabors, executive director.

Look for a real-life superhero to welcome runners. Tavares Chambliss, 36, of Palatine -- better known as American Ninja Warrior's "Neon Ninja" -- returns to encourage participants to be superheroes for the homeless, as event emcee.

Chambliss grew up in Wheeling and attended Harper College. By his own admission, he is no stranger to the realities of homelessness, and now back on his feet -- and climbing the famed Mt. Midoriyama as captured on TV -- Chambliss has joined with Journeys in the fight to end the plight of the suburban homeless.

Support for the race is widespread. Corporate teams are signing up, both to help those in their communities -- and give their employees a team-building experience. Some of them include eDOC Communication in Mount Prospect, ISACA in Schaumburg and the Palatine Public Library.

The race also has drawn support from at least one high school. St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights is encouraging its student athletes to participate. Administrators see the run as more than cross-training. It allows athletes to carry out the school's mission of becoming people of compassion and knowledge, committed to justice.

Let's Read!

The wallaby is native to Australia and is a relative of another marsupial: the kangaroo. Louie, a 6-7 month old juvenile, was one of several interesting animals presented during Saturday's show at the Palatine Library. Right: Kids raise their hands as Jaimie Finlayson, from A Zoo to You based in Marengo, leads an animal show during Saturday's summer reading kick-off party at the Palatine Public Library. The animal show was one of many activities held Saturday at the library to get kids interested in reading over summer break.
